

Opportunities In Energy

Frank Deaton

The People Who Power New York Frank Deaton is a New York Power Authority (NYPA) employee and U.S. Army veteran, with three years of active duty service in Europe. His work for the Judge Advocate General's office involved forensics, auditing and investigations, and duties ranged from helping military personnel with personal legal matters to broader Army litigation issues.

Deaton then received a BS degree in Accounting from the State University of New York at Albany and served with several corporate and financial firms. His diversified experience impressed NYPA, where he is currently Director of Enterprise Risk Management, providing advisory services to help identify enterprise-level risks.

"A major contribution to the successful career opportunities I've had has been my military service," he said. "I'm proud to work for an organization that respects and values veterans."

Opportunities at NYPA Continue to Expand

Did you know that NYPA has done more than half-a-billion dollars in business with minority- and women-owned enterprises? What's more, much of NYPA's energy is generated by its own motivated and diverse work force.

Working with men and women of varied cultures and backgrounds gives us new ideas and perspectives that can improve the way we accomplish our goal of providing reliable, low-cost electricity and clean energy services throughout New York State.

We welcome inquiries from any individual looking to advance his or her career, or minority- and/or woman-owned business.
